SAYHERNAME

Black Women's Stories of State Violence and Public Silence

One Sheet

Black women, girls, and femmes as young as seven and as old as ninety-three have been killed by the police, though we rarely hear their names or learn their stories, including the likes of Breonna Taylor, Alberta Spruill, Rekia Boyd, Shantel Davis, and countless more. #SayHerName provides an analytical framework for understanding Black women's susceptibility to police brutality and state-sanctioned violence, and it explains how—through black feminist storytelling and ritual—we can effectively mobilize various communities and empower them to advocate for racial justice. Centering Black women's experiences in police violence and gender violence discourses sends the powerful message that, in fact, all Black lives matter and that the police cannot kill without consequence. With a Foreword by Janelle Monáe, this is a powerful story of Black feminist practice, community-building, enablement, and Black feminist reckoning.

"The lack of visibility of Black women has changed—and the incredible work of Kimberlé Crenshaw, African American Policy Forum, and the #SayHerName campaign are examples of this. So is this powerful book."
—Janelle Monáe, from the Foreword

"The United States does not value Black life—and white supremacy threatens all of humanity. The Black women's stories of state violence and public silence featured in this powerful and inspiring book are extremely important. We bear children, so when they are robbed from us, it's like our own breath is taken away."
—Samaria Rice, founder, Tamir Rice Foundation, and mother of Tamir Rice

"Reading #SayHerName is an act of solidarity, refusal, and love. Every piercing story in this book, every Black woman heartlessly murdered by the police, had a mother, a sister, a family, a community. Every one of them matters."
—V (formerly Eve Ensler), author of The Vagina Monologues and Reckoning

"In addition to breaking the silence by offering poignant and loving stories of the black girls and women violated by state violence, #SayHerName also documents the organizations and strategies that have been created to combat that violence. In its powerful accumulation of memories and testimonies, we should read this book, then, as providing the resources for a much-needed movement."
—Roderick A. Ferguson, Yale University

Kimberlé Crenshaw, Professor of Law at UCLA and Columbia Law School, is a leading authority in the area of Civil Rights, Black feminist legal theory, and race, racism, and the law. Her work has been foundational in two fields of study that have come to be known by terms that she coined: Critical Race Theory and Intersectionality. She co-founded and serves as the Executive Director of the African American Policy Forum.

#SAYHERNAME TALKING POINTS

- "#SayHerName champions individual victims of state violence, emphasizing the importance of their stories."
- "Overlooked and underreported, the book highlights Black women's susceptibility to police brutality, a pressing issue demanding visibility."
- "Dr. Crenshaw emphasizes the role of storytelling and ritual as tools for community mobilization and advocating racial justice."
- "Using the lens of intersectionality, Dr. Crenshaw's work illuminates the complex issue of police violence against Black women."
- "Dr. Crenshaw's book contributes significantly to the discourse on Black feminist practice, community-building, and reckoning."
- "#SayHerName shatters public silence around state violence, a crucial step towards fostering change."
- "The societal conversation about racial justice and police violence has been significantly influenced by Dr. Crenshaw's #SayHerName campaign and book."
- "Community engagements and town halls have shaped the narratives in Dr. Crenshaw's book, revealing the value of grassroots involvement."
- "Dr. Crenshaw dissects the role of racial patriarchy in instances of state violence against Black women, spotlighting an often-ignored aspect of systemic violence."
- "#SayHerName confronts and challenges harmful stereotypes about Black women that fuel police violence and public apathy."
- "Support networks play a critical role in combating systemic racial violence, a point underscored by Dr. Crenshaw's discussion of the Mothers Network."
- "By demanding recognition for Black women's deaths by police, #SayHerName highlights how public acknowledgment impacts the trauma and mourning process."
- "Dr. Crenshaw's book calls for a counternarrative to shed light on forgotten victims of police violence, pushing for historical recovery despite ingrained biases."

SOME SAMPLE QUESTIONS DR. CRENSHAW COULD ANSWER:

- "The heartbreaking examples you share in your book — such as Rekia Boyd, Tanisha Anderson, and Mya Hall — illustrate a devastating pattern of violence against Black women. How do you hope these individual narratives will reshape the collective understanding of state violence?"
- "You emphasize the urgency of acknowledging and remembering the victims of state violence in your book. Can you speak more about the power of remembrance and its role in creating social change?"
- "Your book touches upon the issue of state violence against Black transgender women. Can you delve deeper into this aspect and how it further illuminates the complexities of intersectionality?"
- "The book explores systemic racism and institutionalized misogyny in its discussion of state violence against Black women. Can you talk about how these two systems of oppression interact?"
- "Your book details how narratives of Black women victims are often overlooked or ignored. What strategies do you propose to amplify these stories within the broader movement against police brutality?"
- "How does your book suggest we can use the understanding and acknowledgement of Black women's unique experiences with state violence to inform policy changes and legislative action?"
- "You examine the role of state institutions in perpetuating violence against Black women. Can you talk about how this critique can be used to catalyze institutional changes?"
- "Can you speak more about the role of grassroots movements and community organization in resisting state violence against Black women, as discussed in your book?"
- "Your book promotes a sense of solidarity and shared struggle. How do you envision this sense of unity informing future actions against state violence?"
- "The book encourages readers to consider the historical and societal context in which state violence occurs. Can you speak more about the importance of this context?"
- "Can you discuss how your book situates the issue of state violence against Black women within the larger struggle for Black liberation and racial justice?"
- "You argue that the lives of Black women are devalued not only by state violence but also by societal indifference. How does your book challenge this indifference?"
- "Can you discuss the connection your book makes between police violence, the prison-industrial complex, and the larger structures of racial capitalism?"
- "How do you envision your book informing future research into the intersecting issues of race, gender, class, and state violence?"
- "What strategies does your book suggest for disrupting and dismantling the systemic and intersectional oppressions that contribute to state violence against Black women?"

Dr. Kimberlé Crenshaw's Biography

“Intersectionality is a lens through which you can see where power comes and collides, where it interlocks and intersects. It’s not simply that there’s a race problem here, a gender problem here, and a class or LGBTQ problem there.”

Kimberlé W. Crenshaw is a pioneering scholar and writer on civil rights, critical race theory, Black feminist legal theory, and race, racism and the law. In addition to her position at Columbia Law School, she is a Distinguished Professor of Law at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Crenshaw’s work has been foundational in critical race theory and in “intersectionality,” a term she coined to describe the double bind of simultaneous racial and gender prejudice. Her studies, writing, and activism have identified key issues in the perpetuation of inequality, including the “school to prison pipeline” for African American children and the criminalization of behavior among Black teenage girls. Through the Columbia Law School African American Policy Forum (AAPF), which she co-founded, Crenshaw co-authored (with Andrea Ritchie) Say Her Name: Resisting Police Brutality Against Black Women, which documented and drew attention to the killing of Black women and girls by police. Crenshaw and AAPF subsequently launched the #SayHerName campaign to call attention to police violence against Black women and girls.

Crenshaw is a sought-after speaker and conducts workshops and trainings. She is also the co-author of Black Girls Matter: Pushed Out, Overpoliced, and Underprotected. Her writing has appeared in the Harvard Law Review, the National Black Law Journal, the Stanford Law Review, and the Southern California Law Review. She is a founding coordinator of the Critical Race Theory workshop and co-editor of Critical Race Theory: Key Documents That Shaped the Movement. In 1981, she assisted on the legal team of Anita Hill during her testimony at the confirmation hearing of Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas.

Crenshaw writes regularly for The New Republic, The Nation, and Ms. and provides commentary for media outlets, including MSNBC and NPR, and hosts the podcast Intersectionality Matters! In addition to frequent speaking engagements, training sessions, and town halls, Crenshaw has facilitated workshops for human rights activists in Brazil and in India and for constitutional court judges in South Africa. She serves on the Committee on Law and Justice of the National Academies of Science.

Crenshaw’s groundbreaking work on intersectionality was influential in the drafting of the equality clause in the South African Constitution. She authored the background paper on race and gender discrimination for the United Nations’ World Conference on Racism in 2001, served as the rapporteur for the conference’s expert group on gender and race discrimination, and coordinated NGO efforts to ensure the inclusion of gender in the WCAR Conference Declaration.
